PREFACE

TO THE SECOND EDITION

Seven years after the appearance of the First Edition of Hieroglyphica, it is with great pleasure that I write this foreword to the improved and expanded second edition. To begin with, the first edition quickly sold out, and furthermore, over the past few years a number of monographs have appeared which have rendered a fundamental revision necessary. The foremost of these is the now completely published Montpellier list¹, which has presented a whole new range of hieroglyphs from the Graeco-Roman period in the volumes which have appeared since 1993, many of which were not in the first edition of Hieroglyphica. A further extensive range of signs has been taken from the presently unpublished sign lists of Erich Winter. Hieroglyphica has been immensely enriched by the publication by Jochem Kahl² of a full list of signs from the Early Dynastic Period. New signs for the classical periods of the history of the Egyptian script, the Middle and New Kingdoms, have been taken from the text editions of K.A. Kitchen³ and the (as yet unpublished) Basel hieroglyph list, for which Erik Hornung is responsible.

An especially large number of new hieroglyphs are taken from Sylvie Cauville's publication of the texts in the Osiris chapel on the roof of the temple of Dendera⁴. This highly important volume of hieroglyphic temple inscriptions was produced using the typeface published in the present volume.

Following the practice of Gardiner's sign list, a new part III has been added, in which difficult to find signs are listed according to their size and appearance. As a general rule, categories A, B, C, E, G, I, K, M and P are omitted from this section, as the objects depicted are usually immediately obvious. Also, composite hieroglyphs and graphic variants only make the occasional appearance in this index. The user should always be able to find an indication of the category to which the required sign, or one very like it, belongs.

I end with the happy duty of thanking colleagues who have contributed to the appearance of this new edition: the co-founders of Hieroglyphica and the Extended Library, Professors Dirk van der Plas and Nicolas Grimal, for accepting this volume into the series Publications Interuniversitaires de Recherches Égyptologiques Informatisées (PIREI); Hans van den Berg, who wrote the necessary computer programs; my wife Gabriele, who had the wearisome task of sorting and arranging more than 11,000 signs; Professors Erich Winter and Erik Hornung who permitted access to their unpublished sign lists; and colleagues at the Altägyptisches Wörterbuch project, as well as Professor Horst Beinlich, Professor Dieter Kurth, Holger Hussy and Alexander Biesbroek, all of whom sent me information about missing hieroglyphs.

The hieroglyphs published in this volume form version 2 of the 'Extended Library', used as typeface for the programs Glyph for Windows and MacScribe. The authors of this volume would be indebted to users for information about further missing signs.

TO THE FIRST EDITION

This publication, 'Hieroglyphica', a computer-font of 4706 hieroglyphic symbols, is the first volume in a newly founded series which will be primarily concerned with the publication of works including software pertaining to computer-aided egyptological research, Publications Interuniversitaires de Recherches Égyptologiques Informatisées (PIREI), published by the University of Utrecht (Dirk van der Plas) and the University of Paris IV Sorbonne (Nicolas Grimal). It is not by chance that Hieroglyphica was chosen as the first volume of this series. Just as the publications of the series are to be the results of joint international efforts, this initial volume represents the fruits of many years of close cooperation.

Work on this project began in April 1988 at a working meeting, 'Programming-languages and Databanks' coordinated by the Department of Egyptology and Sudanarchaeology/Meroitistics of the Humboldt University of Berlin and held in Steinförde, a small town near Berlin⁵. At this time Jan Buurman, Nicolas Grimal and Dirk van der Plas were working on a new edition of the Manuel de Codage while Jochen Hallof was occupied with the compilation of a list for the coding of Egyptian hieroglyphs in connection with his work in the commission Egyptian Dictionary of the Academy of Sciences of the German Democratic Republic. It was clear that these activities should be combined. The result of this merger, a new guideline, was published in the same year and presented at the 5th International Congress of Egyptologists in Cairo⁶.

The meeting at Steinförde was also important to the present publication in another way. Motivated by the wish for continuing cooperation, the Director of the Department of Egyptology and Sudanarchaeology/Meroitistics of the Humboldt University in Berlin and the egyptological unit of the section of religious history of the Theological Faculty of the Utrecht University, Erika Endesfelder and Dirk van der Plas, took on the task of creating a font of hieroglyphic signs on the basis of the guideline mentioned above. The requirements for realizing the project were largely fulfilled from the outset; Christa Link in Berlin, a graphic artist, could provide the designs for the hieroglyphs while Utrecht's Jan Buurman, an experienced programmer, had the knowledge necessary to digitalize the hieroglyphs and incorporate them into the program GLYPH.

The basic technical requirements were realized and the first new hieroglyphs of the category A completed by the end of 1988. However, the work proceeded in a rather tedious manner. The production of the graphic designs for the hieroglyphs took more time than expected. Each hieroglyph, even though it might differ only in the smallest detail from others, required a complete and unique drawing of its own. Thus it was a great help when at the end of 1989 Hans van den Berg, the assistant to Dirk van der Plas at the Centre for Computer-aided Egyptological Research (CCER) of Utrecht University, developed a program which could not only correct the digitalized hieroglyphs already stored in the computer, but could also produce new signs on the basis of existing ones. This saved Christa Link a lot of time as the computer took over about two thirds of the work. At the same time the correction and finalizing of the hieroglyphs gained in importance and occupied Jochen Hallof, responsible for this task, without a pause until April, 1993.

The changes in the former German Democratic Republic since the end of 1989 have had their impact on the project. Particularly the new orientation of the Institut for Sudanarchaeology and Egyptology with the emphasis on the Sudan made it unclear as to whether the drawings could be completed in Berlin in the planned scope within the planned time. Nicolas Grimal's offer to bring the French Institute of Oriental Studies in Cairo (IFAO) into the project and to complete the drawings in Cairo was gratefully accepted and the work-load divided. The drawings of the categories A through L continued to be produced in Berlin while those of the categories M through Aa were the work of Laïla Ménassa in the IFAO. The digitalizing continued in Utrecht and the corrections in Berlin. The IFAO was given the use of the entire font to transform into a Macintosh Postscript-file for integration into Eric Aubourg's program MacScribe.

In Berlin, however, it became difficult to realize even a portion of the work in spite of the financial support given by Dirk van der Plas and the CCER of Utrecht University. Christa Link and Jochen Hallof had to leave the Humboldt University.

At the end of 1991 Jochen Hallof received a post-doctorial grant from the Department of Egyptology of the University of Trier. It was Erich Winter's explicit wish to include the not originally planned general correction of the font in the project. With the permission of the authorities it was possible to bring the time-consuming work of conception and normalizing the font of signs to the conclusion presented in this work. Hans van den Berg and Eric Aubourg updated the programs GLYPH for WINDOWS and MacScribe so that they could manage the extensive font of signs and be offered to users⁷.

In a way the work on such a project is never finished. Any text to be coded could contain hieroglyphs which are not present in the font. For this reason the editors have decided to consider the present list as a first version and to number it as such. The next phase of development will be the revision of all categories. The results of this revision including the evaluation of the Montpellier- and Basel-lists as well as the inclusion of other new hieroglyphs will be made available to users in a relatively short time. The editors ask you in any case to send missing signs to them.

As author of this preface and spiritus rector of the project, I should like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who have contributed to the project, many of whom have already been named. Hans van den Berg has my special thanks for programming and for the very time-intensive work of making the layout, Christa Link and Laïla Ménassa for the thousands of drawings. I thank Hans Crane who digitalized a large portion of the hieroglyphs, Eric Aubourg who transferred the hieroglyphs to a Macintosh Postscript-font and my wife, Gabriele, who did the conceptual drawings for the categories D and F. In closing I extend my special thanks to my co-authors Nicolas Grimal and Dirk van der Plas for their fruitful cooperation over the years and across the many borders.

INTRODUCTION

The typeface published in the following pages is based on the list of codes in the Inventaire des signes hiéroglyphiques en vue de leur saisie informatique.⁸ The latter list was compiled in 1988 by merging the sign lists of the Gardiner, Teinhardt, and IFAO founts with an unpublished hieroglyph index of the Wörterbuch der Ägyptischen Sprache, kindly made available by Walter-Friedrich Reineke.⁹ This encoding list was constructed on the principles of the List of hieroglyphic signs of Sir Alan Gardiner.¹⁰ The scope of the new encoding list, however, made it necessary to distinguish between graphemes and their graphic variants (those whose codes end with a letter). In this system, the first hieroglyph appearing under a particular code was taken as the base form of that sign. The hieroglyphs of the typeface represent basic forms, based on those in use in the Middle and New Kingdoms; the requirements, possibilities, and limits of computer technology had to be taken into account in the detailing of these signs. All hieroglyphs have had to be drawn anew, to ensure uniformity of appearance across the fonts. This has also affected the library of signs of the original GLYPH program,¹¹ the scope of which is the same as that of Gardiner's List of hieroglyphic signs.

Comparison with the Inventaire des signes reveals that new hieroglyphs have been added in all categories as work on the encoding of Egyptian texts has proceeded. Particularly extensive are the changes to categories A (Man and his occupations) and B (Woman and her occupations), which have been systematically re-worked by Jochen Hallof in relation to the categories of the Montpellier list¹² and the pre-ptolemaic sign list from Basel. The latter was kindly entrusted to us by Erik Hornung. Some changes have been made in these two categories to the numbering of the signs employed by the Inventaire des signes, with the effect that there are now a number of gaps in the numbering of the alphabetical lists. Gaps in other categories should be attributed to improvements to the encodings proposed in 1988. A specially written program has ensured that the printed list corresponds exactly to the font on disc.

The publication is divided in two parts, which is reflected in the page numbering, which takes the form of e.g. 1 G - 5 or 2 H - 3. The first digit indicates the part of the book, the capital letter the category of hieroglyph, and the final digit after the hyphen the individual page within that category.

The first part lists all hieroglyphs in the typeface by their alphanumeric codes. The second part is an authoritative listing of the hieroglyphs in each category according to formal and functional aspects. This is the work of Hans van den Berg, assisted by Gabriele and Jochen Hallof. This provides the user with a work of reference for the rapid location of a particular code. It also presents an overview of the occurrence of an individual hieroglyph in the so-called composite hieroglyphs. With a few exceptions, part 2 is thus laid out so that adjacent to a particular hieroglyph will be found all those from the same or other categories with which it may be combined. These combinations can sometimes be rather numerous, as is illustrated in the case of the feather (code H6), on pages 2 H - 2 to 2 H - 3. Finally, all the hieroglyphs are listed in the company of graphically similar forms from other categories, to supply the user with all the possible alternatives in the sign list. An example of this is the grain of sand (code N33), on page 2 N - 6.

The signs in individual categories are arranged in the following way:

- | | |
|---|--|
| A | seated men, kings, and children;
standing men and kings;
groups;
men with animals;
enemies and recumbent figures |
| B | seated women and queens;

The remaining categories generally follow the arrangement of Gardiner's List of hieroglyphic signs.

All three compilers are aware that the arrangement of large parts of the systematic list is subjective. Many hours of discussion were needed over the logic of the arrangement of these 4706 signs and the four versions on which this publication is based; however, other authors would doubtless have come up with different arrangements.

The original pages of the book were produced with the program GLYPH for Windows. The printed hieroglyphs are part of version 1 of the extended library of hieroglyphic signs, with which GLYPH works.
